Ex-Gov. Wm. E. Russell.

When I first saw ex-Governor William E. I told you in my last letter of the shocking last term as Governor of Massachusetts.

He was abroad in Boston at the time on the back of a horse, taking part in some fashion of procession and gracefully engaged in removing and replacing his shiry plug hat, and in bowing to the howling his life in fall. Where he lived when he did has been both in the back of a horse, taking part in some most hardened villatin. His name is Seafashion of procession and gracefully engaged in removing and replacing his shiry plug hat, and in bowing to the howling his life in fall. Where he lived when he did specialty consisted in thus climbing aboard a horse and louting to the multitude in a low but patronizing way. It all reminded me vastly of Vance's old story which he was wont to tell on his Senate colleague Ransom. Vance is now dead, and Ransom American Minister to Mexico, and this is the story:

Identified him. She was—or pretended to be and appropriately commanding in his manner. The other was idie most of the time. She declared that his chief characteristic was his tenderness of heart. He couldn't bear to see any thing hurt. Whenever she caught a rat in a trap he used to say: "Oh, let the poor thing making a spec-sell is looked on as an upstart by such as Joslah Quincy—that cross between a lemon and a lump of ice—and others of the patricians. It was to head off Russell's candidacy that Quincy and others of the blood of the blue attempted to lug out an Olney boom at a recent banquet. Olney declined to be boomed, and so the situation by this very Quincy attempt for Olney was a meeting with Russell. His regard for himself is high and he is apt to display it by being supercilious.

This last trick of nose-tiliting is not uncommon in Massachusetts. I have had occasion to notice it in Congressmen from the Bay State. Virginia and Massachusetts are equally provincial and prone to self plaudit. But there's this difference: I never saw a Virginia Congressman who appeared to recollect that he was in Congress; I never met a Massachusetts Congression who for a moment forgot it. They are born with stills, these latter; egotists from their cradies. What was once the austerity of a real Puritanism comes now to be an insultingly tender discomes now to be an insultingly tender of the New York Journal:

The main difference is appeared to recollect that he was in Congression and objects, or who does not live there. As for Massachusetts society, it has more of strata than the society of Paris under the Bourbons or a pousse cafe. It is the padrone-peon system so far as it can be enforced.

"Yes, sah," replied the darky. "Dat's his name. Matt Ransom."

"Can he trot?" asked Vance.

"No, sah. Cain't trot more'n a cow."

"I see you've named would be able to prove that at the time of the recent very similar murder in Muswell Hill Seaman was at home, laid up with rheumatism. Seaman doesn't make out quite such a good character for himself, when he was told that the knocking on Levi's door which alarmed him and drove him to the roof was done by the niece of the man he had just murdered, he said: "I wish lawyer go. While Russell was Governor he made no stirring record; accomplished nothing of might; stood for nothing. He failed of nothing, for he attempted nothing.

He was made Governor because of his youth. He was a professional boy at the overstermed when the same thing is done.

Mentally, he is neither deep nor shallow, Mr. Anson, the chief constable in quessome sudden exhibition of what he doesn't is not punishment, but restraint which is know, he will never startle with any tre-mendous thoughts. He is well in looks; security, for the safety of the public, we light hair, light eyes, fair as to forehead should adopt efficient means of restraining and nose, but wofully shy as to chin. It is a small, retreating chin, what one might call a cat-chin. It shows sly and cruel in the incurable criminal from becoming a veritable scourge of society. Physical restraint, under lock and key, more or less As a talker, and, indeed, as a thinker or writer, Russell's name is on the roster of the commonplace. He gets his views from his environments and reflects the opinions of the roundabout. Being in a gold region, Russell is gold. Being in a protection hotbed, Russell is not for the lowliest of tariffs. lowliest of tariffs. Were he a Missouri man, now, born there, bred there, he would be for free silver. In short, Russell is of the sort who is acted upon rather than one of those who acts. Russell is an alkall of politics, not an acid.

Our hero is not of the Massachusetts nobility. There is no Mayflower in his past. He is a piebelan in his upcome. Now in Massachusetts this is important. So far has it drifted from the stark day of Warren and the elder Adamses, that today in Massachusetts the question is, "Who said it?" rather than "What was said?" or "Who did it?" father than "What was said?" or "Who did it?" father than "What was said?" or "Who did it?" father than "What was for this lack of Puritan pedigree Rusthis lack of Puritan pedigree Rus- Clack, of a village near Bampton, was condeclined to be boomed, and so the situation by this very Quincy attempt for Olney was made all the better for Russell.
